1. Mr.R.Premraj AP /MECH /EEC
2. Mr.M.Sambathkumar AP / MECH /EEC

Summary of the event:

The Guest Lecture on "Recent Advances in Automotive Engineering" is a branch of applied science, which deals with designing, developing, and manufacturing ground vehicles. Vehicle development is an interdisciplinary optimization problem subject to many design criteria, which are often conflict with each other. In the development of a new vehicle, major design criteria are defined due to fuel consumption, vehicle safety, crashworthiness, durability, ride comfort, handling behaviors, ergonomics, aerodynamics and NVH concepts. The competitive nature of automotive industry forces original equipment manufacturers (OEMs) to make critical decisions among these design parameters and also discussed with Electric vehicles can be classified into three types as tabulated in Table 1: hybrid electric vehicles (HEVs), plug-in electric vehicles (PHEVs) and full electric vehicles (FEVs). HEVs are equipped with an internal combustion engine (ICE) and an electric motor. In these vehicles, the primary source of energy is an ICE that runs on fossil or alternative fuels

A wide range of subjects are taught in Automobile engineering which include mobility design and aesthetics, Automotive materials, Automotive electrical and electronics, computer-aided vehicle design, vehicle maintenance, electric mobility, Fuels etc. Also talks about development of passenger cars, trucks, buses, motorcycles, or off-road vehicles.

An Overview of Stress Management

Stress management is the range of techniques, strategies, and therapies designed to help people control their stress. This can include lowering acute stress, but it is often aimed at lowering chronic stress to improve health, happiness, and overall well-being. Stress management strategies may include:

- Deep breathing
- Eating a healthy diet
- Getting enough sleep
- Guided visualization
- Hobbies and leisure activities
- Meditation
- Mindfulness
- Positive thinking
- Progressive muscle relaxation
- Psychotherapy
- Social support
- Yoga

We all experience stress in our lives. Because many health problems are caused or influenced by stress, it's essential to understand how stress affects your body and learn effective stress management techniques to make stress work

What Is Stress?

Stress is your body's response to changes in your life. Because life involves constant change—ranging from everyday, routine changes like commuting from home to work to adapting to major life changes like marriage, divorce, or death of a loved one—there is no avoiding stress.<sup>1</sup>

Your goal shouldn't be to eliminate all stress but to eliminate unnecessary stress and effectively manage the rest. There are some common causes of stress that many people experience, but each person is different.

Causes

Stress can come from many sources, which are known as "stressors." Because our experience of what is considered "stressful" is created by our unique perceptions of what we encounter in life (based on our own mix of personality traits, available resources, and habitual thought patterns), a situation may be perceived as "stressful" by one person and merely "challenging" by someone else.

Simply put, one person's stress trigger may not register as stressful to someone else. That said, certain situations tend to cause more stress in most people and can increase the risk of burnout.

For example, when we find ourselves in situations where there are high demands on us but we have little control and few choices, we are likely to experience stress. We might also feel stress when we don't feel equipped; where we may be harshly judged by others; and where consequences for failure are steep or unpredictable.

Many people are stressed by their jobs, relationships, financial issues, and health problems, as well as more mundane things like clutter or busy schedules. Learning skills to cope with these stressors can help reduce your experience of stress.
